The two conservative strongholds were weighing their strategies during the weekend. in the light of their close relationships with the U.S., which has cnutioned them against challenging the Israel-Egypt trenty. Indications from Ammen were that King Hussein is genuinely upset both by the current peace process itself, and by the American caution, which he reportedly viewed as con-taining the hint of a threat. The Jordanian monarch was said to have' been considerably restrained by the Saudis, who have been scrutinizing their own Middle East policies in the light of their wide ranging political and economic ties with both the U.S. and Egypt.

Saudl Arabla's amhasandor to Bahrain, Sheikh Abdul-Rahman al-Gadi, who is one of this country's sector diplomatic envoys, sald yesterday his government would not oppose the Egyptian peace treaty with Israel as long as Cairo had not bargained with other Arah interests.

"Egypt can sign trenties with anyone as long as it affects only Egypt. We did not object to the Sinai treaty. The Syrians have the right to do the same over the Golan. But when it comes to a treaty affecting the Palestinians, that would not be an internal Egyptian affair, hut an Arah one," he said in an interview with the weekly newspaper, "Gulf Mirror.

reported to be the current Middle ast situstion, although observers said that the two partics were con-sidering ways of countering the Egyptian Israell pence agreement. The same observers said that the discussioo was likely to involve new arms deals, thus dispelling a fourmonth strain in relations between the two countries, over Moscow's reluctance to supply Syria with the latest Sovict weapons, including sophisticated warplanss.

Iraq, another long-time ally of Moscow and now Syris's partner in a projected union, yesterday warned that the peace treaty Egypt is sign-ing with Israel will create the danger of another war in the Middle East. The Iraqi news agancy quoted President Ahmed Hassan al-Bakr as say-ing in messages to leaders of European. ### Strike may silence radio and black out TV screens

Israel's radio and television services could be "off-the-air" and "offthe-screen" indefinitely beginning this morning.

Barring a last-minute change of heart, more than 7,200 smployees of the Communications Ministry's engineering division will stay nt home as their leaders push a weeklong alowdown into a full-fledged atrike. If this occurs - and the work stoppage tingers on - the telecasting of Eurovision from Jerusalem next Saturday night could be affected. A ray of hope that the strike could be averted - or at least delayed came last night in a personal appeal from Housing and Construction Minister David Levy. He told The Jerusalem Post: "Being personally acquainted with the workere' leaders. I phoned them to suggest that they put off their actioo at least until Communications Mintster Yltzbak Moda'i returns home from Washington. # Treaty signing tomorrow Begin, Vance meet to resolve final disputes and MALKA RABINOWITZ Jerusalcm Post Correspondsots WASHINGTON. - Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and Prime Minister Menahem Begin were due to open a final round of talks last night (after midnight Israel time) to iry to resolve the remaining disputed issues in the Israeli-Egyptian peace treaty package, echsdulsd for algning tomorrow afternoon.

By WOLF BLITZER

This latest surprise development was announced following another lengthy - but not totally successful - session between Vance and Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan at the State Department. Dayao. Defence Minister Ezer Weizman, Energy Minister Yitzhak Moda'i. Ambassedor Ephraim Evron, Legal Adviser Meir Roseone and several of Vance's senior aides were accompanying the secretary to New York, where Begin is staying. U.S. officials stressed that Vance's decision to fly to New York did not represent a crisis in the negotiations. They volced confideoce that the signlog ceremony would take place as scheduled. Sources close to the prime minister were similarly optimistic in their assessment of this latest development. But Daysn was conspicuously more downheat in describing the remaining snags in the pescs treaty sod the accompanying set of U.S. assurances to Ierael.

Regarding the Vance decisloo to fly to New York, one Israeli aource close to the prime miniater speculated that it represented more of a "gesture" to Begin than a last minute attempt to solve a prohlem. Upon leaving the State Department, Dayan said that he had heen unable to reach final agreement with Vance on e proposed U.S. Israeli memorandum of agreement design-ed to provide U.S. political ces to Israel io case the treaty with Egypt is somehow vlolated. The other unresolved matter, he said, involves the drafting of a separate hilateral document piedging a 15-year U.S. guarantee to mee a poselhle chortfall in the cupply of Sinai oii to Israel.

Vance and Dayan opensd thsir discussions on Thursday evening, Immediately after the foreign minister arrived here. Weizman and Moda'i, who arrived in Washington oo Fridsy, have been holding parallel talks with other U.S. and Egyptian of-ficials on the still unresolved matter of the exact timing of the Israeli withdrawal from the Sinal oll fields.

Israel wants to withdrsw from those fields nine months after the treaty is signed, while the Egyptians are pressing for a six-month withdrawal. Weizman spoke yester-day by telephone with Egyptisn Defence Minister Kamsi Hassan All. and Moda'i met with Ambassador-at-Large Alfred Atherton and severai other U.S. officials. But sgreement here alao remains elusive.

The other remaining unresolved issue - the spscific repsyment terms of the proposed $2.2h. U.S. loan to Israel to pay for the Sinai withdrawal — will be raised by Begin personally, probably during the meeting with Vance in New York, Israell officials said yesterdsy. On this issue, Israel is hoping that the Americans will agree to extend 'coocessionary" low-lotsrest rates, rather than the higher "foreign military sales credits." Io addition to the $2.2h. loan, the Carter administration has agreed to provide Israel with an $800m. outright grant. At the State Departmsot, Dayan told reporters that Vance had presented a final U.S. draft for the proposed memorandum of agreement during their meeting yesterday. "There were some parts we are not very glad with," Dayan said. "We would like to see some different language,

But the foreign minister noted that he and Vance "in any ease" will br-ing the draft to Begin in New York. Dayan also said that it may have to he presented "to the cabinet" - a development which could. theoretically, complicate the signing ceremony.

But most ohaervers here were taking Dayan's words with some degree (Continued on page 7, col. 2)

process because the treaty between Egypt and Israel would improve the quality of life in the two countries.

"In my opinion, the large number of Jordanians, who want peace, will hecome much more vocal and perhape King Hussein and the other Arah leaders will say, 'weli, this is a well'," the president said. Carter lo the past has called for the creation of a Paleetiolan homeland but has been cool to the ldea of an independent state. Asked hy Israeli correspondent Dan Shiloo If self-rule for the Palestinians could lead to the eatablishment of an independent state. he replied, "It is not up to the United States to decide the ultimate etatus of the Weat Bank or Gaza." President Carter told Shilon that U.S. involvement in monitoring implementation of the Egyptian Israeli peace treaty would not include a defence treaty with Israel. A memorandum of understanding now being drawn up with Israel would be fairly far-reaching, he said, without giving apecific details. 'We have never had any aort of proposals on either side that there be an actual defence treaty between our two countries." Carter said. "I think Israel has always cherished the concept that they are perfectly able to defeod themselves. And I thick that is an accurate asseesment.

The place where the hlast occurred is particularly crowded on Fridays with shoppers and travellers waiting for inter-urban taxis at the terminal on Rehov Lunz. Pollcemen and shopkcepers said that if the explosion bad occurred an hour earlier, the casualties could have been much worse.

Police questioned taxi drivers and travellers who had been in the area. An hour after the explosion, municipal workers had cleaned up the broken glass and the roads were reopened to traffic.

The terrorist attack came despite fairly intensive security measures, only partly relaxed since President Jimmy Carter's visit to the city two weeks ago. A senior police officer who was at the scene said: "This attack wasn't really unexpected since the terrorist organizations have made no secret of their intention to mar Monday's treaty-signing ceremony in Washington." The army has also increased its

Sharon warns autonomy may turn into trap

Jerusalem Post Staff

Agriculture Minister Ariel Sharon sald on Friday night that if autonomy is not implemented in what be called "the right way," the plan could turn into a great danger to Israel. He also accused a U.S. embassy official of holding contact with PLO supporters.

Interviewed on television, Sharon said that Israel has been called on to make far-reaching gestures which would change the situation in Judea, Samaria and Gaza. These included permitting political activity in the-territories and moving IDF command posts out - "and if I were to tell you what I know, apart from what everyone bas read in the papers, the picture would look much worse."

The IDF would have to restrict its movements in the Gaza Strip to an extent which would make it extremely hard to operate, Sharon said. He added that a U.S. embassy official, whom he named as Ted Piper, was telling PLO supporters in the Gaza Strip that the U.S. would pressure Israel into limiting Its activities in the area, and that the "next stage" would be the establishment of a Sharon asid settlements would continue to be set up in Judea and Samaria, the Gaza Strip, the Golan Heights and the Jordan Rift, in the same way as they had been created in Galilee, the Negev and the Arava. He claimed that the government has made its settlement policy clear in the course of the negotiations with Egypt, and be did not expect that Its implementation would torpedo the peace agreement.

Sharon had also a word of warning: "I would advise the Arabs not to court disaster by repeating the mistakes of 1948. Israel will not allow disturbances either in Nablus and Halhul or within the Green Line. We shall act fairly but firmly."

Earlier on Friday, Sharon told the Engineers Club in Tel Aviv that he would stay in the cabinet "as long as I can act for the implementation of what is essential" to Israel's future. But be would resign should the government "fail to act."

Sharon said settlement in Judea and Samaria was vital to the safety of the bulk of the Jewish population, which lives on the coastal plain. He said that despite American pressure, there would not be a Palestinian state on the West Bank.

U.S. fails to cast UN veto

UNITED NATIONS (Reuter). - The 15-member UN Security Council on Thursday sharply criticised Israel's creation of ssttlements in the ad-ministered Arah territories and set up a three-member commission to investigate the problem. The U.S., Britain and Norway abstained.

But Israel has said it rejects the resolution totally and will not permit the commission to anter the territories. # Khomeini asks support for Islamic republic

TEHERAN. — Ayetollah Ruhollah Khomeinl, leader of the Iranian revolution and de facto head of state, yesterday appealed to voters to endorse his plan for an Islamic republic.

With less than a week to go before a referendum in which Iranians will be invited formally to eign the death warrant of 2,500 years of monarchical rule, Khomeini warned his supporters that there might be attempts to rig the ballot.

In a statement broadcast by the national "Voice of the Revolution" radio, the ayatollah appealed to his countrymen "as a brother" to follow his example and vote for the Islamle republic.

The statement came as calm was restored, at least temporarily, to the troubled province of Kurdistan where Kurdlsh rehels bad been fighting government soldiers in the city of Sandanaj.

The Kurds, who want autonomy or even independence for their region, fought as fiercely as Iranians of other regions to overthrow the exiled sbah. But they mostly reject the idea of an Islamic republic.

In ble statement yesterday, Khomeini sald next Friday's voting would be free and it was the national and Islamic duty of every man and woman to participate.

The National Democratic Front, a grouping of seculer anti-sbah forces. has called for a boycott of the referendum in protest against the limited option open to voters: Do you want an Islamic republic to replace demerits, otrong action ie token against him, which could even lead to his axpulsion from the school. Kvody believes in the "carrot and etick" theory. So next to the demerits there is also a merit mark column. If a pupil improvea lo his studies, he receivee merit marks. If be volunteers to do some odd jobs around the echool during his free time be also receivee merit marks. At the end of the year, those with 25 or more merits receive awards, which include scholarships.

KVODY ADDS that today a vocational high echool has very costly equipment in its classes, "If we didn't have strong discipline in the school, the equipment would be turo-ed into piecee of junk in n very chort time."

Kvody believee that today a vocational high school teachae a child nearly everything. A vocation ean mean even a high administrative job in a bank for inetance, be points out. But Kvody emphasizee that what Israel needs is highly trained personnel for industry.

He emphasizee that industry needs all kinds of the pupils. Those with higher grades can cootinue their education to become engineere and those with lower grades can go directly into industry as technicians. From being of only marginal interest, this Haifa kitchen was transformed into the focal point of the whole apartment. Deborah Lewin reports. Photos by Judy and Kenny.

THE HOUSES on Shoshanat Hacarmel St. on the Carmel mountain of Haifa lie halfuslace undid the year-round follage of green trees. The upper floors are visible to any passerby, but the lower storeys are below street level and hidden from view. The uniqueness of these lower apartments is in their windows and porches facing across the wadi rich in greenery, giving the tenants a feeling of complete isolation from the bustling city.

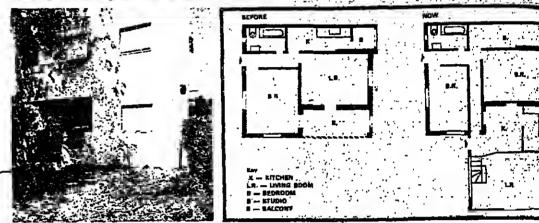

These buildings were built in the late 1940's - some of them after World War II and some after the War of Independence. The common factor between these two waves of con facing the street. Each large apartment consists of three rooms, kitchen, bathroom and balconies. In both types of apartments, a small area was designated for the kitchen. This was a result of the days of austerity: in those days the palate of the Yishuv got by on scrambled eggs, leben and salad on weekdays and stuffed fish on the weekend - thus the kitchen played a marginal role in the plan of ; an apartment.

As a result of the excavation, a vertical space was created which became the sitting-room and gallery. A staircase connects the older up-Der level with the new lower one. As a result, the apartment now has an entirely new functional arrangement, to suit the needs and preferences of the whole family.

Nine years ago Ora and her husband, the engineer Yitzhak Katz, bought this two-room apartment for a relatively small amount (acethe "Before" plan). Ora's imagination and her husband's engineering skills turned the small apartment into an impressive achievement by exploiting the mountainous topographical conadded alongside it, and together it forms the dominant element of the living area.

Its old location was transformed into Ora's studio. The construction took half a year and for over three years Ora worked on renovations and minor changes, using all ber imaginative Back now at our tile tel, we inspect the carliest layer of this century. Look! Our dusty eyee are euddenly gladdened by a ceries of charming geometric designs much like the patterns made by a kaleidoscope, that fascinating toy which preceded and in its way exceeded TV.

These are the floor tiles that once graced the better homee of this part of the world. Geometric, Identical, four of them making a unit but also continuing on to connect with the next repeated unit. they were almost always in traditional colours of brick, yellow ochre, dark grey, sometimes greyish green or hlue. Friends who lived in these old houses before air-conditioning tell me that one of life'e pleasures in a heat wave was to wet the tiles and pad around on them barefoot. I am also told that they were easy to clean and even grew more heautiful with time. Cer-tainly they were built for the ages: you sometimes see parts of such a patterned floor still more or less intact where once a house stood. The obvious theory to occur to our theoretical tile archaeologist would certainly be: "What awful catastrophe must have struck here! what disaster engulied this former highly developed civilization to explain the decline in living standards and home decoration, this deecent from gracious and pleasing design! What dun the earlier, more cophisticated inhahitants must have had staring for hours at the soothing geometry. Too had they were engulfed by barbarians from elsewbere, with their later layers of primitive, undecorated though sometimee garishiy mettled tiles of an obviously lesser culture."

When I ask friends who once lived among the old tiles how they explain the change to the plain ones, aside from the mass-production re-period - they shrug rather eadly and say, "Well, It's just a change of fashion .... "

Of course, a patterned floor either hordering the edge of the room, or overall, or centred - limite room arrangements and can become "tircsome." On the other hand, this is the atmosphere of the Middle East, of which we are supposed to be a part and whose tradition is neither instant nor disposable.

Those Israelis who do not believe every room ought to look like one in Scarsdale and are attracted by the tiles of yesteryear are almost always those whose origins are (like mine, for instance, and most of my triends') far from the Middle East.

People with such quaint tastes have a bard time finding ethnic tiles. Either they have to pay contractors' dsmolition teams to spare the tiles of old houses and, at great expense, scrape off the old cement. Or else they track down Arab suppliers. I have a friend who located some in Tulkarm and exhausted herself lugging them to Tel Aviv.

imagine my excitement, then when I learned that, way down on Herzl Street (No.130), a father-andson establishment is today producing these very decorated tilcs. The name of the place is "Lahatz"; the firm's main business is supplying the material for what is called "schpritz" and also the normal modern "mosaic" tiles in various colours, which are manufactured eleewhere by two associated factorles. The father and son arc Ya'acov and Avner Gluska. The altneu tiles are a small and hardly profitable part of the husiness. They produce them - imagine - because they love them. What makes this even more remarkable is the fact that the Gluskas are Temenites. Imagine, a successful young full day's work hauling material around town to fill orders. His older brother, the late Zacharia Gluska, was a famous figure in the Temenite community here. He was a member of the First Knesset and the founder. of the Yemenite party (and the husband of an American-born Ashkenazi woman), and the author of a hook on the Yemenites, which Ya'akov proodly sbowed me. Zacbaria, Ya'acov, their parents and brothers and sisters came from : the Yemen in 1909 and settled in Neveb Zedek, in a house on Rehov Kiar Saba, where Ya'acov still lives and where Avner was born. The present tile establishment is a continuation of one eet up in Jans years ago by Ya'acov with an Arab partner. The decorative tiles are today still made by Araba; 'Nowadays yoo can't get Jews to do this kind of work." Avner sends the raw materials to Gaza, and olaims that his requirements and specifications are higher than what the Arabs produce in their own workshope. The Gaza factory with which he is associated belongs to an old family friend - 's sheigh my father used to work with. In fact, it was my lather who was asked to go to the father of the shelkh's hride to ask for her hand in marriage, which " was a very great bonour." Small quantities of three different.

The modular. mass-produced kitchen companien make their cabinets primarily from chipboard, or pressed wood, known in Israel as "sebit." The inside of the cabinets, the shelves, and the inside of the drawers are usually covered with P.V.C. or white Melamine.

The motter of materials used is the cause of many questions asked by prospective buyers. "Sebit" has developed a bad reputation in Israel, largely because it is chenper than "aandwich" board (inyers of piywood and chipboard), and can swell under damp cooditions.

"Sebit" users elsim that this reputation is undeserved, and eaused by the inferior work previously done with it in Israel. If "sebit" is covered properly, with formica or P.V.C., its quality matches that of "sandwhich" board st 20 per cent less cost. "Sebit," made industrially through a process of compression. affords absolutely no chance for ineects to live inside It.

The fashion aspect of choosing a kitchen, and the big price differences, are all in the doors.

An Old City carpenter created this kitchen for photographer Richard Nowitz.

Regba and Danar offer about 10 different models - a few more if one counts colour variations. Rim displays six models, or seven if a change in the handles is included. The door models are chipboard covered with formica, textured formiea, or wood veneer, or, in aomo cases, solid wood.

Wood doore are carefully treated against water and insects through a long drying-out process. Regha offers a mahogany panelled door. Dunar features solid onk or pine doors. The imported, treated woods are very expensive, costing 40 to 50 per cent more than formiea. At present, Rim offers an oak veneer door, though new wood models are in the making.

Although there are hundreds of formica colours and textures on the market, most companies work with about 12 standard colours, with other choices possible for an extra charge. Rim limits the selection completely to three or four colours per model with no variations possible, but claims that these colours are carefully chosen for suitability and popularity, and that some of the colours are exclusive to them.

The model designs are constantly changing, although slowly. Usually one or two designs are dropped or added each year. Some prospective buyers feel that this slow turn-over will result in their ordering exactly the same kitchen that many before them or after them have bought or will buy.

This desire for something unique is one of several reasons why many people choose to go to n private carpenter for their kitchen. The modular kitchens are well made, and contemporary in styling, but there are those with an aversion to anything mass-produced.

There are other perfectly valid reasons why someone may choose to hire a private carpenter. Frequeatly, only part of the kitchen is being remodelied, involving a few custommade units, with the old doors being replaced to match the new ones. In some cases, the kitchen or the customer's needs present special problems that the modular kitchens ennot solve. Sometimes the customer wants closer coatrol over the materials being used.

Price, of course, is always a fac-tor, although in this case an elusive one. Depending upon the job to be done and the carpenter hired, the final price may be as high as twice as much, or comewhat lower, or essentially the same as a elmilar job by a kitches company.

A well-cstablished carpenter will usually be nhie to quote you an approximate price per running metre itoday about IL3,500 for formica in-side and out 1, but some will only give an overall-estimate based on your Individual plan.

The most important single factor for success in hiring a carpenter is to know who you're dealing with. Ee sure he's well recommended, and by all means go and look at work he's done and talk to the cilenis. In hiring a carpenter, the customer is not well protected. Endiess problems may arise, unforseca shortages, orice hlkes, aad army service may appear, and the customer bears the brunt.

Private carpenters as a rule do not appreciate things like contracts, receipts, warrantice, and guarantees. Again, your best protection is to have hired a trustworthy carpenter. There are, however. some basic eteps you can take to increase the chances for success: Be sure you know exactly what materials the earpenter is using every step of the way. (Carpenters, as opposed to modular kitchen companies, usually use sandwich bourd rather than chip board, and cover the inside of cabincts and sheives with formien rather than P.V.C.). You should know what you are pay-ing for. This includes the hinges, rollers, handles.

 Find out exactly whet he is going to need before he starts working, and buy it all, right from the beginning. (Be sure he has a place to store it). This should eliminate price rises due to the price changes in the market. • Make sure that all the preliminary conditions in the kitchen are satisfactory (as before putting in a modular kitchen): wails, floor, plumhing, electrical and gas outlets. Often a carpenter's work reflects what he wanted and not what you wanted. Be sure he understands.

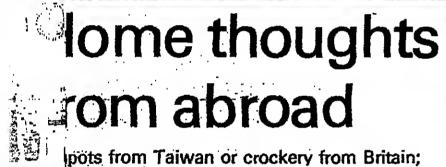

· Be sure you understand what you've ordered. Sometimes what was agreed to in the plan does not turn out to be what the customer had in mind,

• If the carpenter works with an architect in drawing up your kitchen plan, find out if this is included in the price, or if there will be an additional architeet's fee. Is the delivery included in the

Tiling is doae after the floor, or bottom, cabinets have been install-ed. Are the dates coordinated? (Incideatally, a lot of bargaining and dealing goes on with tiles. Be sure you know if you are buying local or imported tiles.1

Tamara Tollman worked previously as a deeigocr nod overseas buyer for Danish Interiors. With that experience, and Danish Interiors' backing, Tamara, who Im-migrated to Israel from Argentina in 1965, decided to launch a new business venture: Danish Plus. The chain of shops, come inside Danish Interiors stores, some entirely on their own, is owned by Danish Interiors and Tamara together. Tamara also sells furniture, wovea ruga, baskets, bedroom linens and accessoriss, wine glassee nnd everything you can imagine for a kitchen. She imports the merchandise from England, Denmark, Italy and the Far Enst; textlles are printed in Israel, but like everything eise she selis, are exclusive to Danish plus.

LESS exclusivity, but more variety awaits the shopper in Dizengoff's Class. Amos Finklesteia, the manager, explains that the store belongs to Argad Import Company, which imports 90 per ceat of all the merchandise and distributes It in Its

Most of Class's kitches and dining-room ware come from the Far East "because they're big on producing that stuff right now," eays Finklesteln.

Class has many different sized east iron pans, whose main advantage is in heat preservation. They haat up speedily but cool down slowly, and are very sasy to clean after soaking. And they're oheap, com-pared to other pots and pans.

Still relatively new in Israel are eramle cooking pots. They are exiremely decorative, and after using one for cooking and serving, you can store it in the refrigerator as it is. A blg pot costs IL199, while a smaller oae costs IL119. Desper pots with lids run from IL199.

A cute little tea-for-two set, in three patterns, from Japan and Taiwan, costs IL299. Porcelain Chinese soup bowls complete with teaspooon cost IL99, Class has an amazing eelection of mugs, mostly imported from the Far East. These come in all shapes, colours and sizes. Especially attrac-tive to the Israell buyer are large mugs, used also for soup bowls, which are IL79. The manager tells me that the Orgad company is Israel's largest importer of mugs, straw and wood products. All the wooden bowis, cutting boards, gobicts, serviette rings and 11th Hapoel int'l meet now named 'Peace Games'

By PAUL KOHN Post Sports Reporter

TEL AVIV. — The 11th International Hapoel Games from May 2 to 8 will be named "The Peace Games," Hapoel Sceretary-General Yitzhak Ofek announced on Friday.

"We would warmly welcome an Egyptian sports delegation to the event," said Ofek, who is also presi-dent of the Israel Olympic Committce.

He added that if Egypt were to send only a symbolic contingeat to the gamee it would be seen as a gesture of goodwill and a tangible expression of the new relationship between Egypt and Israsl. Hapoei has already established contact with sports bodies in Egypt. but it was hinted there that Egypt would not begin sports ties with Israel before diplomatic relations were established. Ofek expressed the hope that after such ties were set Egyptian sportsmen would appear here and Israell athletes would be in-vited to Egypt.

The opening of Hapoel'e "peace games' will take place on Indepeadence Day, when a mass pageant will be held at the Bioom-field Stadium in the presence of Presideat Yitzhak Navon.

Will past lessons be heeded?

THE DEMONSTRATIONS staged yesterday in East Jerusalem, like the terrorist bomb that was planted in Zion Square on Friday, were timed to coincide with the imminent signing in Washington of the peace treaty between Egypt and Israel. Once again it is the volce of extremism, rather than moderation that is being beard.

This, of course, has been the recurring theme in the polltical history of the Arabs in Eretz Yisrael. It was true in the developments that led to the disturbances in the 1930s, it was true after the Second World War, it was true when the Arabs rejected the UN Partition resolution, and It was true when the local population heeded the blood curdling calls of those who urged them to leave their homes "temporarily" during the War of Independence in order to clear the field for the invading forces that were to decimate the Yishuv.

From the Arab standpoint It should be clear by now, if It was not plain before, that this history, in which extremism always won the upper hand, is a tale of lost opportunities. For at every stage, if the forces of reason and moderation bad prevailed, the Arab population would have been spared the bloodshed, and the personal deprivation to which so many, especially those who became refugees, were subject.

Moreover, if in 1947 political wisdom rather than irrationality had prevailed, even the political deprivation which so many Palestinian Arabs claim and feel would not have come about. The deadly impulse which dominated, however, was an unwillingness to accept the legitimacy of a sovereign Jewish society and to live side by side with it.

The danger today is that the dominant forces in the West Bank and perhaps Gaza, faced again with a choice of accommodation to another historic opportunity or rejection, will again adopt the course of unreason. For this is the opportunity, however ambiguous and however undefined, that lies embedded in the proposal to establish a self-governing authority in the West Bank and Gaza that would exist for a period of five years.

Those who are guided only by hostility to the Jewish State, like the PLO, are again prepared to bring suffering upon the people in order to maintain the grotesque purity of their absolute rejectionism. They incite riots and demonstrations, terrorize moderates and appeal to the interests of outside forces, both Arah and non-Arab to sustain the flames of hate.

This time, however, in confronting the historic opportunity afforded by the autonomy proposal, the Arab population on the West Bank and Gaza will have to contend not only with a Jewish offer of coexistence, but also with Egyptian support of that offer. This has only increased the frenzy of the extremists, yet there is still the hope that in the coming months, this rupture in the historic wall of Arab enmity may help provide a new legitimacy for moderation.

For, if nothing else, what should be clear to the leaders on the West Bank and Gaza, is that the new contractual commitments binding Egypt and Israel will not be undermined by Palestinian provocation. The benefits of peace are too tangible and the alternatives too horrendous to permit sabotage by Palestinian extremism.

Israel for its part will have to display restraint as the population in the West Bank and Gaza, provoked from Beirut, Damascus and Baghdad, tries to cope with the new pressures to which it will be exposed.

However, Israel will also not be able to abdicate its responsibility to maintain social order in these territories. For that would mean simply abandoning the population to the whip of extremism.

This will be a challenge for Israel policy in the weeks and months ahead. But if wisdom is to have a chance in the West Bank and Gaza, it will require a commensurate dose of wisdom in Jerusalem.

TODAY'S cahinet meeting will see in the chair its youngest minister (42), and the first member of a religious party to heve heen in that position. Education and Culture Minister Zevulun Hammer became acting prime minister on Friday, with Mr. Begin'e departure for Washington, and he will substitute at the netional heim for nearly a week. The prime minister's proposal that Hammer stand in for him came as a curprise towards the close of the last cellnet meeting. "During the meeting I found myscif-at odds with him, hut this did not affect his offer,' Hammer told me in his usual amiable manner, during our interview in his Tel Aviv office on the 11th floor of the El Al huilding. Hammer keeps his feelings very much to himself, with the glint of an iron will inadvertently showing through his relaxed eahra affability from time to time. He was obviously buoyed by the prospect of holding the levers of the power machine if only for less than a week. He pointed out that the only other NRP minister to have acted as premier was the late revered leader of the party, Haim Moshe Shapiro, who stood in for a very short speli when David Ben-Gurion had heen Ill. Shapiro had not presided over a cahinet meeting.

Hammer is the son of a pensionedoff Shemen factory worker. The father came on aliya in 1933 as part of a Polleh Hapoel Hamlzrachl group and belongs to the disappear-ing breed of motivated workers. Did his father's struggle as part of a minority fighting "Red" Haifa's Mapai steamroller mouid the son's resolve to dissolve his party'e historic partnership with Labour and form the present alliance with the Likud? An Interesting thought in Israeli psycho-politics.

Hammer has moved upwards with an entire etrata of fellow graduates of Bnel Akiva, and it is from this group that he has picked his closest friends and aides, as well as his wife (they live in a modest Glvatayim flat with their four children). In his inexorable progress towards the top leadership of his party, Hammer has worked closely with such comrades as Yehuda Ben-Meir, now Knesset faction head, Danny Vermns, party secretary-general, Aryc Hahn, Knesset faction secretary, and Shaul Shiff, party spokesman. The strength of the youth circles, now edging into domination of the NRP, lies not only in Hammer's political skills, hut in the close bonds

READERS' LETTERS

REGISTER VICTIMS' NAMES

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post Sir, - I recently returned from a three-week holiday in Israel, and while there, I was forcibly struck by one particular attitude of Israelis, whom I met. Having lost my mother and 11 other relatives in the Holocaust, I myself am obsessed with this period in our history and think that nothing should be left undone to document events during that time.

I spoke to several Israelis, who had also iost memhers of their families in the Holocaust. When I asked them if they had applied for the forms issued by Yad Vashem to register the names of those who had been killed during that time, I discovered some did not even know of the existence of these forms, while othere expressed indifference or reluctance to face the emotional ordeal involved in filling them. From my own experience, I know that it is painful to put down the re-quired data, but I feel that we owe it to those who perished to register their names, so that the number of the victims is documented and people will not query the figure of eix million. In 10 or 20 years, most of the survivors who know about those who died will themselves have gone. I appeal to your readers to ask Yad Vashem for these forms and register the names of their dead relatives for the sake of the victims and for the sake of Jewish history. FRANCES MAYBAUM Edgware, Middlesex.

Short-term at the helm

Political Reporter MARK SEGAL writes that Education Minister Zevulun Hammer is obviously buoyed at the chance of acting as prime minister in Mr. Begin's absence in the U.S. for the signing of the peace treaty. A wide-ranging interview embraces the minister's background and his frank views on the peace process.

Hammer will be in constant contact with the prime minister these next few days and expects to be informed of any decisions taken by the Cahinct Defence Committee whose mcmhers are attending the treaty signing in Washington - over such issues as the making of any unilateral gestures to Egypt and the codifying of U.S.-Isracl hliateral relations. The Defence Committee has heen empowered to take decisions while in the U.S.

Hammer hoped that those who dissented from the peace treaty would not go so far as to hreak away from the coalition parties as there was an urgent need to close ranks for the very real struggie in the feteful year ahead. He had already addressed personal appeals to Geula Cohen, Moshe Shamir and Yigal Hurwitz, after his success in keeping Rahbi Druckman within the NRP faction.

MKs had not voted for the peace

I asked how he thought he would react when the first Sinal villagers had to be evacuated.

The minister replied that as the deadline for this move was still three years away, there might be time to persuade Egypt to reconsider the issue, and make a gesture hy allowing the scillers to stay. If, however, the Egyptians remained adamant. Israel would fulfil its treaty ohligations.

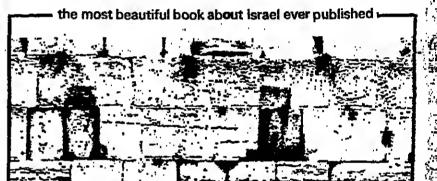

The treaty should not lull Israelis into a false sense of security. "We must never forget that we got peace only because the Arabs knew we were strong."

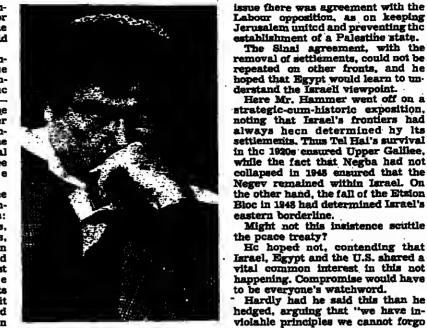

Hammer was ready to agree to a defence pact with the U.S. only if it was aimed at neutralising the Russian threat. Otherwise he disliked the idea. For one thing it might harm Israel's image among the American public. Also, the U.S. could take too long to act in an emergency, and the pact might very well tie Israel's hands if it were attacked.

Finally, Hammer said that he intended prodding the government into paying more attention to domestic issues, and as acting premier would today assoclate with Housing Minister David Levy in bringing to the cahinst economic and social Items which elipped behind on the agenda because of the peace discussions

Born in Petrefsky in the Ukraine in 1893, Sam Cohen lost part of his family in a pogrom, came to this country as a youth, returned to Ruseia and eventually settled in New Britain, Conn. ### ISRAEL AT ITS BEST?

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post

Sir, - The self-styled secularists demand the rule of law and not the rule of halacha. This surely means that, in their view, the law of the land is hinding even when it conflicts with their own ideas of fairness or with iraditional Jewish values.

When Israeli girls, who not only reject the authority of halacha, but also defy the law of the land, consider national service as a hurden when their cole claim to publicity is their efforts to ensure that no one else gets out of it and these giris are described as representing "Israel at its hest" (your leader of March 2), then either our values have got sadly confused or words have lost all meaning. The best — like beauty — is apparently in the eyes of the heholder. KENNETH L. COHEN

THIRTY YEARS AGO

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post

Sir, - Though a supporter of the current peace process, I found some of the language of the section, "The Jerusalem Post 30 Years Ago," of February 23, disturbing to say the least.

The issue involved was the 1949 signing of the Israel-Egyptian armistice in Rhodes. One of ths reporter's remarks was: "The signing automatically signified Egypt's de facto recognition of Israel." The editorial column read: "By its acceptance, Egypt has separated itself from the other Arah countries and has recognized the Stete of Israel."
